GENDER, ECONOMIES AND ENTITLEMENTS IN AFRICA

Elizabeth Annan-Yao
Zenebe N. Bashaw
Christine G. Ishengoma
Godisang Mookodi
Grace Ongile
Charmaine Pereira
Manthiba Phalane
Richard Ssewakiryanga
Sylvia Tamale
Chris Okechukwu Uroh

CODESRIA Gender Series 2

COUNCIL FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF SOCIAL SCIENCE RESEARCH IN AFRICA
Contents

Contributors ...................................................................................................................... v
Preface ............................................................................................................................... vii

Chapter 1
Analysis of Gender Relations in the Family, Formal Education and Health
Elizabeth Annan-Yao ........................................................................................................ 1

Chapter 2
Gender Trauma in Africa: Enhancing Women’s Links to Resources
Sylvia Tamale ..................................................................................................................... 18

Chapter 3
Gender and Resources: Some Macro and Micro Level Considerations
Godisang Mookodi............................................................................................................. 32

Chapter 4
Accessibility of Resources by Gender: The Case of Morogoro Region in Tanzania
Christine G. Ishengoma.................................................................................................... 53

Chapter 5
Trajectories of Women, Environmental Degradation and Scarcity: Examining Access to and Control over Resources in Ethiopia
Zenebe N. Bashaw .......................................................................................................... 67

Chapter 6
Understanding Women’s Experiences of Citizenship in Nigeria:
Charmaine Pereira ........................................................................................................... 87
Chapter 7
Sexual Identities and Sex Work – Interrogating the Interface:
A Study on Constructed Identities Among Female Sex Workers in Kampala
Richard Ssewakiryanga ................................................................. 111

Chapter 8
Globalisation, Trade and Gender – The Key Concerns
Grace Ongile ...................................................................................... 146

Chapter 9
Globalisation and the Feminisation of Poverty:
A South African Perspective on Expansion, Inequality and Identity Crises
Manthiba Phalane ................................................................. 159

Chapter 10
Globalization and the Question of Gender-Justice:
The Nigerian Experience
Chris Okechukwu Uroh ................................................................. 167
Contributors

Elizabeth Annan-Yao is currently Professor of Sociology at the University of Cocody-Abidjan, Deputy Director of Research at the Institute of Ethno-Sociology of the same university, and co-edits the African Sociological Review. She is specialized in Population and Development with emphasis on Migrations, Reproductive Health and Education.

Zenebe N. Bashaw is at the Institute of Development Research (IDR) in Addis Ababa Ethiopia.

Christine G. Ishengoma is currently a Lecturer in the Department of Agricultural Education and Extension in the Sokoine University of Agriculture, Tanzania. She is also the Director of a Tanzanian NGO, the Women Poverty alleviation. Her areas of interest for research are Gender Issues, Food Security, Community Nutrition, Processing and Adding value Crops, Poverty Reduction Issues, Economic and Marketing.

Godisang Mookodi is a Lecturer in the Department of Sociology in the University of Botswana. Her areas of research, teaching and publication include: gender relations and identities, development and economic change, domestic units (households and family structure). Her contribution to gender discourse in African Social Sciences, policy and practice is aimed at fostering a recognition of the important interface between macro-societal processes and individual agency within different societal contexts.

Grace Ongile holds a PhD Degree in Economics. Currently she is a Senior Programme Officer at the African Capacity Building Foundation (ACBF), Harare, Zimbabwe. She has been a coordinator of a research program, International Trade and Gender in East Africa.

Charmaine Pereira is an independent scholar based in Abuja, Nigeria. Her research interests include feminism and women’s struggles, the state and civil society, and sexual harassment in Nigerian universities. She has taught at universities in Britain and Nigeria, and is currently the National Co-ordinator of the Network for Women's Studies in Nigeria.

Manthiba Phalane teaches at the University of Venda for Science and Technology, Northern Province, South Africa.

Richard Ssewakiryanga currently works as a Government Consultant with the Government of Uganda. He is a social scientist with postgraduate training in gender studies and social anthropology from Makerere University in Uganda. He has also pursued a number of research fellowships at Northwestern University (USA), University of Sussex (UK), and Legon University (Ghana). His research work has focused mainly on gender and development issues, poverty and policy processes and cultural studies.

Sylvia Tamale is a feminist activist and senior lecturer at Makerere University's Law Faculty in Uganda. She has published widely on a variety of topics, including her groundbreaking book, When Hens Begin to Crow: Gender and Parliamentary Politics in Uganda (Westview Press, 1999).

Chris Okechukwu Uroh was a lecturer in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Ibadan, Nigeria. Before his sudden death in 2003, he published widely and edited a book with Samir Amin entitled Africa and the Challenge of Development.
Preface

Over the years since its founding in 1973, gender research and training activities have assumed a progressively important role and place in the work of the Council for the Development of Social Science Research in Africa (CODESRIA). Within the framework of the Council’s strategic plans for the period 2002–2007, a decision was made to carry the existing institutional commitment one step further by launching a CODESRIA Gender Series that would also serve the goal of creatively extending the frontiers of the institution’s publications programme. The hope was that through the Series, not only would the Council take a lead role in showcasing the best in African gender research but also provide a platform for the emergence of new talents to flower. The thematic variety and analytic quality of contemporary debates and research in Africa around gender issues is testimony to the mileage that has been successfully covered since the early days when African feminists struggled hard to make their voices heard. Today, few are the social scientists who are not aware of the basic issues in gender research and the community of those who apply the gender approach is growing. But as several of the participants at the CODESRIA-sponsored April 2002 Cairo international symposium on new directions in African gender research also observed, the challenges that remain in engendering the social sciences and the policy process are numerous, and addressing them requires the mustering of the capacities and convening powers of institutions like CODESRIA. The Council stands ready to play its part in meeting these challenges and the new Gender Series is designed as a modest contribution which in full bloom will capture current debates and deepen the African contribution to reflections on the theme of gender, feminism and society.

As indicated earlier, CODESRIA’s commitment to the goal of engendering the social sciences and humanities in Africa dates back a long time. Some of the early research which the Council supported was instrumental in the development of new perspectives in African gender research while an investment has also been made in recent years in the provision of opportunities for training younger scholars in gender methodologies. In this connection, the CODESRIA Gender Institute has run every year since its inception in 1998, covering a variety of themes and gaining in respect and recognition among female and male scholars alike. The path-breaking 1992 international conference which the Council hosted on the theme of engendering the social sciences stimulated a series of initiatives and debates, and also generated some of CODESRIA’s best-selling publications. The emergence of an active and networked community of gender researchers in Africa in which CODESRIA has played a frontline role underscores the point that a positive wind of change has blown across the social research community, and there is no turning back the clock of the struggle for gender equality. This notwithstanding, the term ‘feminist’ still generates fear among some male (and female) researchers, and as Fatou Sow observed in her keynote address at the CODESRIA 10th General Assembly, it is still not completely given that women can fully enjoy their rights without let or hindrance (‘les femmes ont le droit d’avoir les droits’). Through its gender-related scientific activities and the launching of its Gender Series, CODESRIA acknowledges the need to challenge the masculinities underpinning the structures of repression that target women. It is to be hoped that the Series will be kept alive and nourished with insightful research and debates that challenge conventional wisdom, structures and ideologies that are narrowly informed by caricatures of gender realities. While much research has been done in this regard by feminist scholars elsewhere, in Africa, sustained research remains to be initiated in ways that are sensitive to the predicaments of women at different levels of society within and across national and regional boundaries. CODESRIA is committed to encouraging research along these lines. However, the rigour with which such research is conducted is of utmost importance, if gender studies and feminist scholarship are not to fall prey to the same myopia that accounts for the insensitivities of mainstream male-centred perspectives or the irrelevancies of western approaches masquerading as a universalism that takes no cognisance of the African historical context or which is ill-adapted to African concerns.

Most of the papers that have been selected to launch the CODESRIA Gender Series were initially presented at the April 2002 Cairo symposium which was organised around five main objectives, namely, to: (a) provide a space/platform for an exchange of ideas as well as a sharing of visions on gender-related themes and issues from pan-African perspectives; (b) prioritise areas of gender research that have a potentiality to transform social relations; (c) encourage gender-based knowledge production which is informed by African realities and give a ‘voice’ to younger African scholars; (d) identify ways and means of improving advocacy and consolidating linkages between knowledge production and activism for the advancement of women interests; and, (e) work towards a cross fertilisation of ideas, methodologies and epistemologies, as well as consider ideas for the creation of comparative research networks on issues affecting women and their livelihoods. The first four publications chosen to launch the CODESRIA Gender Series bear testimony to the diversity of interests in the field of gender research, diversities which are necessary for a healthy debate that advances knowledge. The Council hopes that readers will be sufficiently stimulated as to consider contributing manuscripts for consideration for publication in the Series.
Preface

Adebayo Olukoshi
Executive Secretary

Francis B. Nyamnjoh
Head of Publications