

HIGHER EDUCATION SUPPORT PROGRAMME

TITLE: The public services contractualised public control in Senegal: the case of Public-Private Partnerships

AUTHOR: Djibril DIOUF

SUMMARY

Through this paper, our initial objective was to understand the control exercised by the government on their private partners in the Public-Private Partnerships. This was necessitated by the differences in objectives of the partner institutions and their different characteristics.

This is why it has been the question for us to understand how the authorities through the institutional and contractual arrangements exercised this role of control over the private partner.

Finally, on the treatment of the differences between partners, the differences in goals, values and characteristics, the opportunism of partners especially the private ones, the need for an alliance and cooperation, the pragmatism of partners have been highlighted. In other words in the PPP, it is necessary to manage such differences.