Summary : This book is the result of a research project, called African Potentials, that we have been conducting for 10 years. This project was aimed at overturning negative stereotypes the world has imposed on Africa, such as poverty, hunger and conflict, the achievement of which would help to decolonise and de-Westernise our world while creating a new, alternative future. This book explores how this can be achieved, focusing on the wealth of African knowledge and institutions that African people have created and practised throughout their history. While learning from these indigenous systems, this book reconsiders the subservience to Western values that have been assumed to be universally applicable. This volume aims to establish an ideology that radically transforms the dominant framework of knowledge, and that can relativise and pluralise the hegemonic centre.

5. Chasing freedom: histories, analyses and voices of student activism in South Africa

MQOLOMBA, Zukiswa ; PILLAY, Suntosh R., eds.

ISBN : 9782382340455.

Related Subjects : student movements | social change | universities | Higher Education | Racial Discrimination | academic freedom | South Africa | student activism | African universities

Summary : This book covers diverse histories of student movements in post-apartheid South Africa, taking note of the historical moment of the 1976 student uprisings and the evolution of student activism since that seminal event. Decolonization and reform of the higher education sector are important themes of the book. The volume aims to understand how student movements comprehend and articulate demands for the process of decolonization and Africanization of the curriculum, their transformative effect on the university and the role that a decolonized and African university should play in South African society's pursuit of freedom. The book explores transformation of universities specifically with regard to race, gender, patriarchy, sexuality, and people living with disabilities in relation to student experiences. The book also deals with aspects related to institutional racism, funding, class, access, violence, and student services. It explores the nature of contemporary student mobilization as a quest for education as freedom in a democratic country, deconstructing the Rhodes Must Fall and Fees Must Fall movements that have reignited interest in the role of student activism in South African society. This book is timeless and timely: celebrating and critiquing student activism in transforming higher education, society and our times.

Based on interviews with the investors, government authorities, workers, outgrowers and smallholder farmers in Nigeria, Ghana, Kenya, Tanzania, Malawi, Mozambique and the Congo, the book depicts the striking diversity of such deals.

Summary : Cet ouvrage est le fruit d'un processus participatif, rassemblant plusieurs auteurs d'horizons différents, mais résolument convaincus de la pertinence de s'intéresser, hier comme aujourd'hui, à la problématique du genre et de la migration. Si migration reste une affaire d'hommes, la migration des femmes s'intensifie en Afrique au cours de la dernière décennie avec l'accélération de la mondialisation libérale. De multiples conventions ont été adoptées et des protocoles additionnels élaborés pour préciser les contours des migrations internationales mais en dépit de l'évolution du cadre juridique, les droits humains des migrants, plus particulièrement ceux des migrantes, ne sont toujours pas encore effectivement assurés. L'inventaire des situations de vulnérabilité des femmes migrantes et des formes de violations de leurs droits humains révèle un vaste éventail de causes et renvoient à plusieurs référentiels. La publication du présent ouvrage est un moment clé pour contribuer à l'évolution du cadre conceptuel « genre et migration ». Des tentatives de réponses y sont apportées en vue d'assurer l'effectivité des droits des migrantes et des migrants en Afrique notamment à partir de données scientifiques nécessaires pour informer des politiques publiques pertinentes et efficaces.

Related Subjects: universities | higher education | academic freedom | social sciences | Africa | public humanities | african universities | intellectual freedom | neo-liberal policy | Lusophone Africa

Summary: For those interested in the questioning of the humanities, this is a significant contribution for rethinking the university in the Global South and in the corporatized Western academy. It is a strong critique of neo-liberal policies and practices that, together with colonial legacies and authoritarian rule, plague African higher education. The other added value is the focus on so-called Lusophone Africa, one that is not easily found in English. This collective work results from an exercise to re-enact freedom in the African University(-ies). It mobilizes the concept of Public Humanities in order to reflect upon the current emptying of emancipatory possibilities in African Higher Education that has been feeding itself from the prevalence of undemocratic rule in the shadow of neoliberal policies, transfiguring what liberation struggles set out to do into normative and disciplinary politics. But also decolonial and citizenship contemporary aspirations and the current and institutionalized attacks on critical thinking and pedagogy at the university as well as the need to qualify the relationship between the institutionalized site of the university and the production of emancipation and freedom. In the Public Humanities approach rehearsed here, humanity is not a soliloquy; it is a matter of ontological insurrections, solidarity and justice against zones of non-being. CODESRIA

Related Subjects: social policy | economic and social development | development policy | land reform | agrarian reform | social welfare | Africa | inclusive development | nation building

Summary : The 'counter-revolution' in Development Economics in the 1980s fundamentally altered the way the state 'thinks', which is evident in the state's retrenchment and reconstitution of the state's relationship to its citizens. The combination of deflationary macroeconomic policies and a residual approach to social policy, broadly, and social provisioning, more specifically, fundamentally altered the post-colonial trajectory of public policy in Africa. Despite the neoliberal ascendance that nurtured the more residual direction of social policy, the contention for an alternative vision of social policy remained and advanced with vigour. The chapters in this volume were initially presented at the inaugural Social Policy in Africa Conference, held in November 2017 in Pretoria, South Africa. The essays document the shifting trajectories of social policy in Africa, the current state of play in the field, and the alternative vision of social policy framed by the idea of Transformative Social Policy. Specific contributions range from the deployment of social policy in framing the nation-building project, endogenous mutual support institutions, land and agrarian reform as a social policy instrument, the gender dynamics of social policy, and the mechanism enabling the spread of cash transfer schemes on the continent.
